Introduction

Slovenia is a country in central Europe with an estimated population of 2.1 million.¹ Slovenia is a decentralised unitary republic with a parliamentary democracy and has a civil-law legal system.²

FGM/C Prevalence

There is no information available on the prevalence of female genital mutilation/cutting (FGM/C) in Slovenia, either for girls and women who have undergone FGM/C or those who are at risk of FGM/C. It is known that the number of migrants from FGM/C-practising African countries is very low in Slovenia.

According to a report by a civil-society organisation, two cases of suspected FGM/C were registered, but no further action was taken.³

National Legal Framework

General Law

There is no specific law or provision criminalising FGM/C in Slovenia, nor has 28 Too Many encountered any statements by the Slovenian Government condemning FGM/C or confirming the application of general criminal law to it.

However, general criminal law does implicitly apply to FGM/C. FGM/C could fall under Articles 123 or 124 of the Slovenian Criminal Code (2008, amended 2017) (the Criminal Code). Which offence FGM/C would fall under would depend on the consequences of each individual case.

Article 123(1) of the Criminal Code defines 'severe bodily harm' as inflicting damage to health by endangering the life of the victim, including the destruction or permanent, severe impairment of an organ; the temporary, severe weakness of an organ; temporary loss of the ability to work; temporary disfigurement of the victim; or serious, temporary damage or less severe, but permanent damage to the health of the victim. Under Article 123(2), it is an aggravating circumstance if severe bodily harm results in the death of the victim.

Article 124(1) defines 'extremely severe bodily harm' as inflicting damage to health resulting in a risk to life of the victim; destruction or substantial, permanent impairment of any vital organ; permanent loss of the ability to work; or severe, permanent damage to the health of the victim. Under Article 124(2), it is an aggravating circumstance if extremely severe bodily harm results in the death of the victim.

Article 192(2) prescribes that a parent, guardian, foster parent or any other person who maltreats or tortures a minor is punishable by law. Performing FGM/C on a child can be considered maltreatment or a torturous act and would therefore be criminalised under Article 192(2).

Article 125(2) prescribes that intentional infliction of 'severe' (Article 123) or 'extremely severe' (Article 124) bodily harm is not a criminal offence if the victim gives her consent, provided that the interests of others are not adversely affected or a common legal value is not endangered. It should be noted that the physical integrity of an individual is a limitedly disposable good, which means that a full and unrestricted ability to dispose with one's rights in relation to one's body is largely contrary to public morality and disruptive and threatening to social peace. Consent in such a situation does not exclude the unlawfulness of the conduct. An individual's consent to injury to the most fundamental bodily integrity – i.e. mutilation (without any medical indication) – cannot make any such conduct lawful.

Article 125(3) prescribes that intentional infliction of 'severe' (Article 123) or 'extremely severe' (Article 124) bodily harm during medical treatment or a healing activity is not a criminal offence if consent is given in the form and under the conditions laid down by law. Since FGM/C would most likely not be recognised as a medical or healing treatment in Slovenia, these conditions would exclude consenting to FGM/C as an exemption from punishment.

Definition of FGM/C

The law does not contain a definition of 'FGM/C', nor has 28 Too Many been able to find any government source defining it.

Women and Girls of All Ages

The performance of FGM/C on women and girls of all ages has been criminalised in Slovenia. Articles 123 and 124 of the Criminal Code do not contain an age restriction.

Procuring, Aiding and Abetting

Procuring, aiding and abetting FGM/C are criminalised in Slovenia through general criminal law.

Procuring FGM/C – when someone hires another person to perform FGM/C – would most likely fall under Article 37(1) of the Criminal Code, which criminalises soliciting another person to commit an offence, and would qualify someone as an 'accomplice'.

Aiding FGM/C would fall under Article 38(2), which criminalises assisting another person in committing an offence by providing advice or instructions, providing means, removing obstacles or making a promise to assist the perpetrator post-FGM/C. This would also qualify someone as an 'accomplice'.

Abetting FGM/C – when someone instigates another person to perform FGM/C or assists him or her in it – would fall under Article 38(2) and would also qualify someone as an 'accomplice'.

Article 38(1) prescribes that any person who intentionally aids the perpetrator in the commission of a crime is generally subject to the liability of the perpetrator of a crime or may be given a lighter penalty.

Allowing the Use of Premises

Allowing the use of premises for the purpose of FGM/C is most likely criminalised in Slovenia through general criminal law. It is very likely that allowing the use of premises would qualify as aiding or abetting the crime by removing obstacles and providing opportunity for the commission of the crime and would thus fall under Article 38(1) of the Criminal Code.

Providing or Possessing Tools

Providing (specific) tools for the purpose of FGM/C is criminalised in Slovenia through general criminal law. Providing (specific) tools would qualify as aiding or abetting the crime by providing instruments for the commission of the crime under Article 38(1) of the Criminal Code.

Article 39 prescribes that aiders and abettors who are involved in a criminal attempt are subject to the liability established by the law for the criminal attempt.

Possessing (specific) tools for the purpose of FGM/C has not been criminalised in Slovenia. The Criminal Code does not contain a general provision on preparation, but it does contain a definition of an 'attempt' of an offence. Article 34(1) prescribes that any person who intentionally initiates a crime, but does not follow through with it is punishable for a criminal attempt if:

- that crime is punishable by at least three years' imprisonment; and
- that crime is punishable by a lesser sentence, but the law under which it is criminalised specifically provides that an attempt is also punishable.

Possessing (specific) tools for the purpose of FGM/C may qualify as an attempt to commit a crime; however, someone only possessing (specific) tools can still change his or her mind. Merely possessing (specific) tools is specified as a 'preparatory act(s)', which may be detected externally, but a person does not yet meet the legal elements of 'criminal offence'. Criminalising preparatory acts may lead to difficulties in proving the person's intention; for example, purchasing particular things or devices are often routine tasks that do not necessarily aim at the subsequent execution of a criminal offence.

Failure to Report FGM/C

Failing to report FGM/C has been criminalised in Slovenia, but only in instances where FGM/C results in the death of a victim.

Article 281(1) of the Criminal Code prescribes that any person who is aware of the commission of a crime punishable by at least fifteen years' imprisonment and fails to report it to the competent authorities is punishable by law.

Article 281(2) prescribes that an official who intentionally fails to report a crime is subject to the same punishment as prescribed under Article 281(1).

However, Article 281(3) prescribes an exemption from the penalty if the person who fails to report the crime is a spouse, partner, lineal relative, sibling, adoptive parent, adoptive child or the advocate, physician or priest (confessor) of the perpetrator.

Article 280(1) prescribes that any person who is aware of preparations for a crime that is punishable by three- or more-years' imprisonment and fails to inform the competent authorities in order to prevent it is punishable by law.

If a crime is punishable with at least fifteen years' imprisonment or a life sentence, Article 280(2) prescribes that a person who fails to report the preparations for such a crime is subject to a harsher penalty than the one prescribed under Article 280(1).

However, Article 280(3) prescribes an exemption from the penalty if the person who fails to report preparations for a crime is a spouse, cohabitant, partner, lineal relative, sibling, adoptive parent or adoptive child of the perpetrator.

Article 45 of the Patient's Rights Act permits medical professionals to breach their professional secrecy to report a patient's medical condition where a risk to life or a risk to health is present.

Article 6 of the Family Violence Prevention Act prescribes that institutions and organisations that encounter possible continuous violence have an obligation to report such instances to the Social Work Centre, unless a criminal offence is not suspected and a victim is explicitly against reporting the instance. If the victim is a child, any person, especially one working in the educational, medical or care sectors, has an obligation to report such an instance to the Social Work Centre, the police or the prosecutor.

Medicalised FGM/C

Medicalised FGM/C is criminalised in Slovenia under Articles 123 and 124 of the Criminal Code, since there is no specific provision on medicalised FGM/C in the Criminal Code, nor one on malpractice by a licensed medical professional or medical quackery.

Extraterritoriality

The Criminal Code extends extraterritorial application of Slovenian criminal law to the commission of FGM/C abroad only if FGM/C constitutes a crime in the country in which it was committed (Article 14(3)) – thus it is always under the requirement of double criminality.

Under Article 12, Slovenian criminal law applies to FGM/C committed abroad if the perpetrator is a Slovenian citizen.

Slovenian Criminal law applies to anyone who commits FGM/C abroad against a woman or a girl who is a Slovenian citizen (Article 13(1)) or has been apprehended in the territory of Slovenia and has not been extradited to the foreign country (Article 13(2)).

Penalties

In Slovenia, there are penalties for committing FGM/C and crimes related to it, depending on which provision of the Criminal Code FGM/C or the related crime can be prosecuted under in a specific instance.

- Article 123(1) prescribes a sentence of up to five years' imprisonment for inflicting severe bodily harm.
- Article 124(1) prescribes a sentence of up to ten years' imprisonment for inflicting particularly severe bodily harm.

In FGM/C cases it is likely that aggravating circumstances set out under Articles 123 and 124 apply.

- Article 123(2) prescribes a sentence of up to ten years' imprisonment for inflicting serious bodily harm resulting in the death of a victim.
- Article 124(2) prescribes a sentence of up to fifteen years' imprisonment for inflicting particularly severe bodily harm resulting in the death of a victim.
- Article 192(2) prescribes a sentence of up to five years' imprisonment for maltreatment or torture of a minor by her parent, guardian, foster parent or any other person.

Thus, the maximum penalty for FGM/C in Slovenia is fifteen years' imprisonment.

- Article 38(1) prescribes that aiders and abettors of a crime are subject to the liability of the perpetrator of a crime.

- Articles 281(1) and 281(2) prescribe a sentence of up to three years' imprisonment for any person who fails to report to the competent authorities a crime punishable by at least fifteen years' imprisonment, or any official who fails to report to the competent authorities a crime of which he/she becomes aware in the course of his/her duties, where the prescribed penalty is imprisonment for at least three years, and the perpetrator is prosecuted ex officio.
- Article 280(1) prescribes a sentence of up to one year of imprisonment for any person who fails to report to the competent authorities preparations for a crime punishable by three- or more-years' imprisonment. Article 280(2) prescribes a sentence of up to three years' imprisonment for any person who fails to report to the competent authorities preparations for a crime punishable by at least fifteen years' imprisonment or a life sentence.

Protection

Protecting Uncut Girls and Women

Uncut girls can be protected through child protection laws in general civil law.

Article 106 of the Non-Contentious Civil Procedure Act provides the possibility of the court to ex officio issue an interim order in proceedings for the protection of the child's best interests. Such protection may limit or prohibit contact between parent(s) and a child.

Article 7(3) of the Family Code prescribes that the child's best interests are provided if parents take into account in particular the personality of the child, his or her age and stage of development, and his or her desires; they adequately meet his or her material, emotional and psychosocial needs by acting in a manner that demonstrates their care for and responsibility towards the child; and they provide the child with appropriate educational guidance and encouragement in his or her development. Article 173(1) prescribes that, in agreement with a Social Work Centre, the court may prevent contact between the parent(s) and the child if the child is at risk as a result of the contact and his or her best interests can only be sufficiently safeguarded by limiting or withdrawing the right of contact.

There are no specific or general laws protecting uncut women, aside from general criminal law.

Implementation of The Law

Court Cases

There are no Slovenian court cases in relation to FGM/C known to 28 Too Many.

Conclusions and Recommendations

Conclusions

FGM/C is not explicitly criminalised in Slovenia through a specific law, provision or governmental declaration. However, Slovenia has ratified conventions condemning FGM/C, including the Istanbul Convention, and general criminal law does implicitly apply to FGM/C.

Consequently, the law does not contain a definition of 'FGM/C' and it is not clear whether all types of FGM/C would fall under general assault laws.

Procuring, aiding and abetting FGM/C would be criminalised through general laws on participation in offences.

It is a criminal offence in Slovenia to fail to report that FGM/C is being prepared. However, spouses, cohabitants, partners, lineal relatives, siblings, adoptive parents or adoptive children of perpetrators are exempt.

The Criminal Code extends extraterritorial application of Slovenian criminal law to the performance of FGM/C abroad, always under the requirement of double criminality, if either the perpetrator or the victim has Slovenian nationality.

Recommendations

It would be useful for Slovenia to order an inquiry into the prevalence of FGM/C and the number of girls and women possibly at risk of it.

We recommend that Slovenia issue a governmental declaration confirming the application of criminal law to FGM/C, including a definition of 'FGM/C' that corresponds to the World Health Organization's definition of 'FGM' and specifying that FGM/C is a criminal offence if performed on a woman or girl of any age, regardless of (perceived) consent (especially in the case of a minor).

We also recommend that Slovenia instate an obligation for (at least) relevant professionals and institutions to report cases of FGM/C and cases where there are reasonable grounds to believe that FGM/C may be committed imminently.

Finally, we recommend that Slovenia extend extraterritorial application of Slovenian criminal law to the performance of FGM/C abroad, regardless of double criminality, in cases where either the perpetrator or the victim has Polish nationality or is a resident of Poland.

Please note that the use of a photograph of any girl or woman in this report does not imply that she has, nor has not, undergone FGM/C.

This report analyses and discusses the application of national (criminal) laws to the commission of FGM/C and any possible related crimes. It also explores other legal factors deemed relevant, such as legal obligations to report the commission or likely upcoming commission of FGM/C, available legal protective measures for girls and women at risk of FGM/C, and any obligations of national governments in relation to FGM/C.

The initial research conducted for this report consisted of a questionnaire developed by 28 Too Many (part of Orchid Project) and Ashurst LLP. The information contained in the responses to that questionnaire was then reviewed by Middelburg Human Rights Law Consultancy, updated and used as the basis of further research from relevant sources. This report is mainly based on primary legal sources such as legislation, case law and authoritative literature, but does use secondary sources such as government documents, journal articles and newspaper articles.

This report has been prepared as a work of legal research only and does not represent legal advice in respect of any of the laws of Slovenia. It does not purport to be complete or to apply to any particular factual or legal circumstance. It does not constitute, and must not be relied or acted upon as, legal advice or create an attorney-client relationship with any person or entity. Neither 28 Too Many, Orchid Project, Ashurst LLP and Middelburg Human Rights Law Consultancy nor any other contributor to this report accepts responsibility for losses that may arise from reliance upon the information contained herein, or any inaccuracies, including changes in the law since the research was completed in August 2021. No contributor to this report holds himself or herself out as being qualified to provide legal advice in respect of any jurisdiction as a result of his or her participation in this project or contribution to this report. Legal advice should be obtained from legal counsel qualified in the relevant jurisdiction/s when dealing with specific circumstances. It should be noted, furthermore, that in many countries there is a lack of legal precedent for the penalties laid out in the law, meaning that, in practice, lesser penalties may be applied.
